

1.956
A2 F116

~~583687~~

Issue

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
Production and Marketing Administration
Washington 25, D. C.

February 15, 1946

* Fact Sheet on Broilers and Fryers

The Problem

With record stocks of all kinds of poultry in storage at present, heavy seasonal production of broilers and fryers — $2\frac{1}{2}$ - to 4-pound chickens — in major eastern production areas has created a problem of temporary oversupply.

This problem has been further complicated by the growing shortage of poultry feed through the conservation of grain for direct human use in food-deficit foreign countries.

The Solution

Increased consumption of broilers and fryers in the heavily populated cities of the Northeast, East, and South would be of material aid in solving this immediate problem.

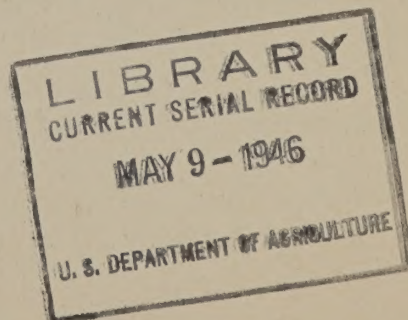

As a result of heavy production, plus the feed shortage, market supplies of such chickens are expected to be more than adequate for the next several weeks. As a matter of fact, the stocks expected to be available will provide more of these birds for consumers than they have had at any time during or immediately following the war.

Thus, for a period of several weeks from the present time, consumers will find broilers and fryers a "good buy" as well as wholesome, enjoyable, and healthful food. Now is the time for the consumer to obtain all he wants of a toothsome food that was hard to get at any time during the war because most of the supply was being purchased for the U. S. armed forces.

American service men and women learned to think of chicken as something more than a Sunday dinner. They looked forward to a meal of it at any time.

That goes for civilians, too, who, because of the scarcity during the war, never managed to get quite enough.

An extra meal or two of broiled or fried chicken for the average family will help to solve the problem of temporary oversupply of a food for which America is justly famed.

APR 12 1946

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
LIBRARY

1911

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

1911

The University of Chicago Library
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

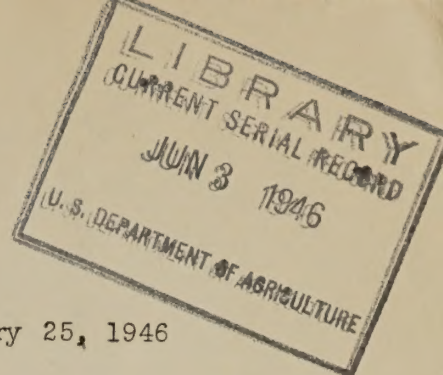

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

The University of Chicago Press
has received from the
University of Chicago Press
a copy of the

1.956
A2 F116
Cop. 2

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
Production and Marketing Administration
150 Broadway
New York 7, N. Y.

February 25, 1946

Fact Sheet on Broilers and Fryers

The Problem

With record stocks of all kinds of poultry in storage at present, heavy seasonal production of broilers and fryers -- $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 4-pound chickens -- in major eastern production areas has created a problem of temporary oversupply.

This problem has been further complicated by the growing shortage of poultry feed through the conservation of grain for direct human use in food-deficit foreign countries.

The Solution

Increased consumption of broilers and fryers in the heavily populated cities of the Northeast, East, and South would be of material aid in solving this immediate problem.

As a result of heavy production, plus the feed shortage, market supplies of such chickens are expected to be more than adequate for the next several weeks. As a matter of fact, the stocks expected to be available will provide more of these birds for consumers than they have had at any time during or immediately following the war.

Thus, for a period of several weeks from the present time, consumers will find broilers and fryers a "good buy" as well as wholesome, enjoyable, and healthful food. Now is the time for the consumer to obtain all he wants of a toothsome food that was hard to get at any time during the war because most of the supply was being purchased for the U. S. armed forces.

American service men and women learned to think of chicken as something more than a Sunday dinner. They looked forward to a meal of it at any time.

That goes for civilians, too, who, because of the scarcity during the war, never managed to get quite enough.

An extra meal or two of broiled or fried chicken for the average family will help to solve the problem of temporary oversupply of a food for which America is justly famed.

If further information or educational material is required, please communicate with Chester A. Halnan, Area Officer for Marketing, at the above address.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JANUARY 10, 1917

DEAR MR. TAYLOR:

REPLY TO YOUR LETTER OF JANUARY 8, 1917

100-100000

I have your letter of January 8, 1917, regarding the proposed amendment to the National Bank Act, and have given it my careful consideration. I am sorry that I cannot give you a more definite answer at this time, but I am sure that you will understand my position.

The proposed amendment is a very important one, and I am sure that you will agree that it is one that should be given the most careful consideration. I am sure that you will understand my position.

Very truly,
J. M. TAYLOR

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.

I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position. I am sure that you will understand my position.